

BARROW'S GOLDENEYE

Bucephala islandica

Western North America

The Barrow's Goldeneye has a distinct white crescent-shaped cheek patch. Females aren't too particular about keeping their own offspring. One female will often times take care of many different broods.