

COMMON GOLDENEYE

Bucephala clangula

North America

Common Goldeneyes are sometimes called "whistlers" because of the whistling sound created by the wings in flight. They can be distinguished by a white oval cheek patch and a green iridescence on the head.