

GADWALL

Anas strepera

North America

Gadwalls appear to be drab-colored and are often called the "grey duck", but males have a beautiful pattern of intricate markings on the body feathers. The white speculum is a good field identification mark.